

Information note n° 7

14 June 2019,

20 June International Day for the Liberation of Louisa Hanoune

Gatherings and delegations in the following countries: Germany, Brazil, Cameroon, Ecuador, Spain (embassy in Madrid and consulates in Barcelona and Alicante), France (embassy in Paris and in front of 12 consulates), Great Britain, Mexico, Niger, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland, Venezuela, Belgium.

In Algiers, a gathering will take place, on the initiative of the National Committee for the Liberation of Louisa Hanoune, in front of the Workers' Party headquarters.

Campaign in Algeria:

- Read in El Watan, 13 June:

The PT, the PST, Jil Jadid, the Literary Café of Béjaïa (CLB), the Committee of Solidarity with the Workers (CSTB), the LADDH, the collective El Hachemi Cherif and autonomous unions from different sectors of activity, notably SNTE, Unpef, Cela, Snt-postiers, Sntfp, Satef, Snapap, and Cnapeste, are united around the single slogan: “demand the unconditional release of the general secretary of the Workers’ Party and all the political detainees and prisoners of conscience”.

The initiators of this protest action alert that “the incarceration of the general secretary of the PT, Louisa Hanoune, worries us even more due to the deterioration of her state of health, which could put her life in danger”. According to the latest information, her close collaborators in the party affirmed that the outspoken activist “is in detention while suffering from several chronic illnesses”. “Her state of health is dangerously deteriorating.

She needs specific medical treatment and health conditions”, indicated Djelloul Djoudi, national secretary of the party, in an interview published in these very columns.

Like many prisoners of conscience, we can also cite the case of the human rights activist and member of the CNDDC, Hadj Ghermoul, 37 years old, from Mascara. He rots in a cell in Saïda for having publicly demonstrated his rejection of the proposed the 5th term of Bouteflika. There are some tens of prisoners scattered across the jails of the country, including Ghardaïa, Kolea, Relizane and EL Harrach. Baba Nedjar, citizen of M’zab (Ghardaïa), is the oldest political detainee in Algeria.

“Faced with this worrisome situation, which could lead to the irreparable, a situation lived out by the human rights activist, Dr Fekhar”, the signatories of the declaration call for “the broadest possible mobilisation of all the political and social forces in this gathering and to unite in defence of the fundamental and democratic freedoms, those that that would establish a rule of law, the dream and aspiration of every Algerian since the independence of our country”.

- A call from 40 Algerian artists who demand the release of Louisa Hanoune.

- Read in the Algerian daily newspaper, Liberté, 14 June, excerpts of a long interview with Boudjemaâ Ghechir, lawyer for Louisa Hanoune:

“Provisional detention must be an exceptional measure”

“Many activists and political personalities are rotting in prison. How do you explain this frenetic application of provisional detention, when this derogatory measure is supposed to be reserved for the most serious of crimes?”

Indeed, a wave of reprisals against the defenders of human rights, journalists, unionists, activists and lawyers has intensified since the beginning of the big demonstrations (hirak). We must firmly condemn this wave and exhort the authorities to immediately cease any form of harassment against the defenders of human rights. We must also guarantee that in any circumstance, all the defenders of human rights would be able to carry out their legal and legitimate actions, without fear of restrictions or reprisals.

Provisional detention is an exceptional measure and can only be ordered if the obligations of judicial control are not met:

- When the accused does not have a fixed address or does not present sufficient guarantees of representation before the courts or when the crime is extremely serious.
- When provisional detention is the only means to conserve the proofs or material evidence or to prevent either pressure on the witnesses or the victims or a consultation between the accused and accomplices, risking to obstruct establishing of the truth.

- When this detention is necessary to protect the accused, to stop the offence or prevent it from happening again.
- When the accused voluntarily shirks the obligations coming out of the prescribed judicial control (Article 123 of the penal procedural code).

Therefore, for example, the imprisonment of Mrs Hanoune is incomprehensible from the moment she presents all the guarantees to remain at the disposal of the courts. But the Indictment Chamber is sovereign.

Precisely, the Workers' Party has just appealed to public opinion concerning the deterioration of Louisa Hanoune's state of health. What are your apprehensions as a member of her defence collective?

Mrs Hanoune was summoned before the investigations judge of the military tribunal to be heard as a witness in an affair in which the investigation was already open following the examination of the statement from her hearing by the services of the judicial police in execution of a rogatory commission by the same judge and verifications of the elements of information thus gathered. Sadly, Mrs Louisa Hanoune has been accused and placed under a committal order. Mrs Hanoune, her party and the democratic movement in our country and abroad can neither understand nor accept this incarceration.

This has given rise to a legitimate and strong emotion, as well as considerable indignation in our country as well as abroad.

Mrs Hanoune suffers from at least four chronic illnesses. Her state of health is deteriorating dangerously, and this, despite medical treatment from the prison doctors. Beyond medicine, she needs a strict diet and continued medical supervision.

Her incarceration came in full hirak for a new republic with slogans calling for a radical change and the departure of the system.

This is her true fight for a process founded on an incontestable and uncontested constitutional base, considering her conviction that the constituent power return to the people. She is fully engaged in the hirak. She is a fighter who incites everyone to take part in this peaceful revolution. She condemns any act of disinterest or desertion. Mrs Hanoune is a militant and political leader who fully assumes her role. Sadly, she has been removed from the field of battle alongside all her Algerian sisters and brothers. She is incarcerated for what she has been and what she has represented.

She has the right to have difficulty accepting being deprived of her freedom in these historic moments. Her health is also suffering because of it. She has lost 8 kg in a month. Algerians are still in shock from the death in prison of a prisoner of conscience, Dr Fekhar. I hope the judicial authorities at the level of the military tribunal take her medical situation into account to order her release and allow her to take back up her political activities and her fight for change.

A new demand for provisional release will be introduced to the military tribunal of Blida this coming 20 June. Do you expect a positive response this time?

The provisional detention could end immediately following a decision taken by the investigating judge after consulting the prosecutor, and with the accused being responsible to commit to being present for all the stages of the proceedings and to keep the investigating magistrate informed of all her movements. Let us hope that the investigating judge will make such a decision before 20 June. Failing that, the collective of lawyers will present a demand for provisional release, and it will defend its point of view and the application of the provisions of Article 123 of the code of penal procedures cited above.
